

CLOSING MOKENA SCHOOL DAYS CROWNED WITH VICTORIES IN GAMES AND CONTESTS

The Mokena school team again defeated the Manhattan High school team last Saturday at Mokena, by a score of 18 to 2.

The Mokena team made scores of hits all the way thru the game, while Manhattan made but a couple of hits. Mokena scored runs in almost every inning, while Manhattan scored one run in the first and one run in the fifth inning. Every player on the team got one or more hits except McGovney. There were many doubles, and a few triples, one by Homerding and one by Walsh who tried to stretch it to a home run but was called out at the plate. Capple got five hits out of six times at bat. Walsh caught two fly balls, Matri threw a man out at first. Homerding threw two men out on first and had 22 strike outs. Every man on Mokena's team played good ball, except for an error or two.

It was just Mokena's day, that's all. There was a good crowd present and every one was satisfied with the game.

At the Second Annual Track and Field Meet held at Monee Friday, May 24, Manhattan carried off the honors in the high school, and Mokena repeated her performance of last year by taking first place in the grade school event.

In the high school event Smith of Manhattan was high with 18 points, while in the grade school Walsh of Mokena was high with 20 points, taking four firsts. Barlewort scored 10 points and Brown one. Following are the total points scored by each team:

HIGH SCHOOL GRADE SCHOOL
Manhattan 39	Mokena 31
Monee 21	Monee 10
Beecher 14	Manhattan 9
Elwood 3	Frankfort 8
Channahon 0	Beecher 3
	Elwood 3

The relay was won by Manhattan with the following men: C. Smith, Dietzman, L. Smith and Brown.

The Will County Declamatory contest was held at Monee last Friday evening, May 24. There were three divisions, Grade School, High School Girls and High School Boys Divisions. The winners of the grade school division were "Bobbie Shaf-to", by Myra Kolber of Mokena, first place and "Ma What Did Dad Say?" by Donald Eneix of Channahon, second place. The winners of the High School Girls Division were "Maize and the Airplane", by Lyla Hackenberg of Elwood, first place, and "Dog of Flanders", by Merle Holmen of Channahon, second place. In the High School Boys Division "The Blue Bathrobe", by Stanley Tritt of Monee was first and "The White Hands of Telhan", by Clayton Smith of Manhattan was second.

Gold medals were given to the winners of first place in all three divisions, and 8 silver medals for second place.

The play "Deacon Dubbs" which was given last Thursday night by the Mokena High School was a real success. In spite of the rain and the thunder storm, a large crowd turned out. This was the first play to be given in the new school auditorium, and one hundred fifteen dollars were turned in. It is quite possible that after expenses are paid there will be close to $90 clear.

This sum is to be turned over to the school for purchasing equipment for the gymnasium, or for the beautifying the grounds or school building. Added to the $50 which was turned in last year, there is now quite a nice "nest egg" for this purpose.

The pupils of the Mokena High School received bad news Monday. Examinations are going to be held next week. The first year class will have examinations in Algebra, English, History and Geography. Geometry, English, History and Geography are the subjects in which the second year class will take exams. Of course we are all hoping that we will make a good enough grade to pass and we guess Mr. Lively is hoping so too.

For the past week and up to now the pupils of Mokena High School have been very lazy and inattentive. They want to go to sleep or look out of the window or sprawl all over the floor. They hate to study, and are slow to report when told to do something. None of them are surprised to hear Mr. Lively say "wake up" or "sit up or you will go to sleep". Most of the pupils are shedding tears (of gladness) at the fact that school is mostly out and vacation is nearly here. If any of them see something to laugh at they proceed to do so, and not quietly usually. Some of the first year girls are especially skilled at this. What's the answer to it all?—Spring Fever!

New Filling Station

J. V. Hall is erecting a gas and filling station and lunch room on his premises along Wolf Road north of Mokena. He will handle the Elmsner Oil Company products.

Commencement Exercises June 5th

The commencement exercises of the Mokena Public School will be held on the evening of June 5 in the new school auditorium. The program will be as follows:

Resume Work on Southwest Highway

Trucks and a big steam shovel are at work again on the Southwest highway at Orland Park, operations being begun Monday morning. The hill along the Wabash right of way is being cut down and the earth is being used on the fill northeast of Orland.

Cutting down the hill north of 143rd street will leave an unobstructed view of the Wabash rail road crossing on 143rd street.

New Lenox Pupils Graduate

The graduation exercises of the eighth grade pupils of the New Lenox public school was held Tuesday evening at the M. E. church at 8 o'clock. Lois Walsh was valedictorian; Jean McClure, salutatorian; Hazel Werner, class prophesy. Response to the presentation of diplomas, Holand Fitzer; parting charge to the eighth grade, Donald Townsend.

Will Tinley Council Re-Hire Motor Cop?

The Tinley Park village council will meet next Monday night. A number of important measures are coming up, among them being the question whether Officer George Smith is to be re-hired. At the last meeting Officer Smith was only re-hired for thirty days.

The Town Doctor

SAYS

Records show that many of the old sayings are falling by the wayside, the latest of which is the one about the impossibility of converting the hearing apparatus of a female omnivorous mammal into a silk overnight bag. A man in New York has ruined that by actually making silk of a sow's ear. But the tired and proven statement that "A man can appreciate only that which he knows" will undoubtedly outlive the span of years of the most of us.

Arthur Brisbane tells of a story about a brown rat in Lincoln Park, Chicago. This rat lives happily in his hole under a tree, never doubting but that the whole park was made just for him, as some people believe the whole town in which they live was made just for them. This rat is an agnostic—you can't make him believe anything that he cannot understand and prove, and as he cannot understand or prove very much, he is happy and self satisfied. He is a good rat, however, minds his own business, and keeps regular hours. He runs up and down his little path, looks with contempt at the queer animals which live up the tree, and some day he will die in his hole, with his teeth grown long, convinced that he has not missed a thing that life has to offer.

Without intention of drawing any undue comparisons, the fact nevertheless remains, that in every community there are residents, who like the rat, deny what they can not understand; citizens who are contemptuous of that which is near them, and which COULD be appreciated. Intellectually, these people are as rats—rodents to the civic life of the community. These people do not KNOW but unlike the case of rats, it DOES make a difference and upon the shoulders of somebody or some group of somebodies is the responsibility of doing that which is necessary to make them appreciate.

Tinley Garden Club George Oram, 92, Visits Flossmoor Flower Gardens

BY MRS. JOHN SWISHER
God made a garden just to find Another way to be loving-kind; And the things we see in the garden-row Are the words he has written to Tell us so.

—A. Grimes.

The members of the Tinley Park Garden Club made a short tour last Saturday afternoon in the vicinity of Flossmoor, Illinois, where they visited the gardens of J. H. Burdett and Doctor Vaughan. On arrival at the Burdett home, the party was welcomed in a very cordial manner by Mr. and Mrs. Burdett who accompanied their guests over the grounds. Within this spacious domain everything is beautifully kept. An especially attractive feature is the winding path through the woodland, leading to a picturesque stream. There was a mystery and a charm about this spot, not to be defined or described. Pictures were taken of the entire group. Mrs. Burdett served iced-punch and cookies in the garden. On leaving, the members thanked Mr. and Mrs. Burdett profusely for this most delightful occasion. In a short time the happy party arrived at the Vaughan estate, where they were made to feel their welcome by Dr. and Mrs. Vaughan, who greeted them at the entrance of the garden. Perhaps it is due to the fact that this beautiful spot has been occupied for many years by lovers of flowers, birds and butterflies, that one feels the enchantment at once. On the branch of a tree, a robin poured out a gorgeous proposal in song. Beyond the hedge the gardener was working diligently. In the cool shadowy pool the goldfish darted here and there, and over all the murmuring of the wind thru the trees. Mrs. Vaughan added immeasurably to the pleasure of everyone by asking them into her home. Just a peep at the wonderful fire-place made one want to rest forever, close by, in an easy chair. The Tinley Park Garden Club wishes to thank both Mr. and Mrs. Burdett and Dr. and Mrs. Vaughan for their hospitality, also all those who so kindly offered the use of cars to make this trip.

A "Get-together" of our Civic Committee took place last week when the members of same met at the park to plant seeds, and plan the planting of flowers. Mrs. Rogers has again accepted the great responsibility as chairman of this committee, and assisting her are Mrs. Fred Goebel and Mrs. Harry Mager.

Tinley to Stage 4th of July Program

The American Legion and the Lions Club are going to work in conjunction in putting on the biggest fourth of July Celebration that Tinley Park has ever seen.

The voters who deter the building of better schools, the paving of roads and streets, the making of play grounds, the laying of sewers, the installation of disposal plants and water filtration plants; the business people who insist on being "storekeepers" and "pooh-pooh" the idea of clerk training, yet weep and wail that chain store and capital are ruining their business; the resident to whom a stranger says: "This looks like a pretty good town," and replies: "Yeah, it's all right, if you like it"; the merchant that the community has supported but who refuses to belong to a service club or civic organization, and who belittles runs down and decries every attempt on the part of anyone to help the community; Mr. Average Citizen who sits back and says nothing, does nothing, with an "It's none of my affair" attitude; the ever present percentage that go out of their way to run the community down maliciously; the resident who takes no part in the clean-up campaign, an orphan's home benefit, hospital or other charitable drive; the property owner, resident or otherwise, who refuses to eradicate visible community abominations; the man, grown old, who cares not a whit if the swimming pool of his forgotten boyhood joys is polluted with the refuse of his factory; the gossip, the civic derelict, the knocker and the fool—THESE are the rodents who must be shown and taught the costliness of their ways before, and in order that they may appreciate.

Now is the time for every THINKING citizen and civic organization, every business man and every city official to awaken to the very evident fact that "What was, isn't—these things have changed and that old fashioned ideas of community life will not stand the gaff of modern ways of doing things.

Graduating Class Entertains Board

The graduating class of the Orland Park High School were hosts at a dinner and theatre party last Wednesday evening in honor of the members of the School Board and the Faculty.

The banquet was held in the Orland M. E. church and was served by Mesdames Peter Wagner, Edward J. Rust and Matt Ludwig and that these ladies more than did themselves proud was the verdict of the 40 diners who partook of the repast.

Robert Wagner acted as toastmaster and master of ceremonies. In the program that followed the dinner, Margaret Bishop read the class history, Isabelle Franks, the class will, Ethel Rust the Class Prophecy and Ruth Ludwig the class poem. Alvin Uthe as pres. of the Freshman Class congratulated the graduates and accepted on behalf of this class the legacy of being the upper classmen during the coming year. Prof. E. F. Holt, principal

Mokena Pays Tribute to Its Soldiers Memories

The Memorial day program held at the new Mokena school Thursday morning was a very pleasing affair. The Mokena orchestra furnished the musical program. N. F. Heiman was the chairman.

The editor read the roll of the soldiers buried in the St. Mary, St. John and Old Cemeteries.

Edward Nadelhoffer of Joliet was the speaker of the day. He pointed out that with the passing on of the old soldiers, the modern age is taking less interest in the observance of Memorial Day compared to other years. Rev. Harold Sandall of the M. E. offered the invocation as well as the benediction.

Richard Hensel was chosen as chairman for next year's program committee and Fred Cappel was chosen as treasurer.

At the close of the program a line of march was formed and the procession proceeded to the three cemeteries and decorated the soldiers graves with flowers and flags.

Hold Memorial Services In Orland Park Cemeteries

Memorial services were held at the Cooper Cemetery, Orland Park Thursday morning at ten o'clock. Rev. Paul T. Sanders, pastor of the Orland Park M. E. church made an address. The Boy Scouts placed flags on the soldiers graves and the Girl Scouts decorated them with flowers. A similar service was held at the Brooks cemetery the same afternoon at two o'clock.

Tinley Holds First Memorial Program

Tinley Park celebrated its first Memorial Day service at the Tinley Park Cemetery Thursday morning under the auspices of the newly organized American Legion Post.

Rev. Chaney, pastor of the Tinley Park M. E. church was the speaker of the day. The grave of Wm. Koehler, World War veteran was decorated with flowers and a marker. The Tinley Park Boy Scouts assisted in the service. The Midlothian Post was present and loaned their stand of colors to the Tinley Post for the occasion as the latter have not got their colors yet.

Don Hall of Mokena was the bugler and sounded "taps".

A good sized crowd attended the exercises.

Do You Want to Fly

The Ford Tri-Motor plane will fly at Joliet next Monday afternoon and Tuesday all day. A large number of Mokena people are going to take an aerial ride. If you wish to fly see Cooper & Hostert at Mokena for particulars, reservations, etc.

made several announcements which were followed by short talks by other members of the faculty and the school board.

The entire assemblage then piled into waiting motors and were whirled away to attend a theatre party in Chicago.

The evening was replete with good things to eat, good things to hear, good things to see and to remember—all in making an evening of good fellowship which will long be a pleasant memory to the participants.

Tinley Lions to Install Fountains

The Tinley Park Lions Club is continuously doing some thing for the benefit of the Tinley Park community. The latest public benefit is the proposed installation of two bubbling drinking fountains. One is to be installed near the willow tree in the village square near the Rock Island depot, the other west of the Vogt Department Store. The Lions placed the order for the fountains with E. Freberg and Sons after voting on the proposition at their meeting Monday night.

Legion Dance at Tinley This Sat.

This Saturday night will be a gala night in Tinley Park when the newly organized Tinley Park Post of the American Legion give their first public dance at the Saenger Hall. A record breaking crowd is expected. Everyone is invited to attend and help the boys to make their undertaking a big success.

CHAPTER I

Early in the afternoon of a certain Saturday Jim Stanley stood at one of the windows of his lofty office looking out at a panorama of which he seldom tired. Away, through the haze of the late afternoon, he could see a glimpse of New York harbor, with its busy traffic, and in the far background a huge dim figure vaguely stabbed the dusk with its uplifted torch. He gazed upon it in silence for a time and then with a sigh and a gesture of impatience he turned, sat down and began to dictate somewhat irritably to the typewriter upon his desk.

"Of course there is always the possibility of error in these calculations, and it would be wise to allow a considerable margin of safety, therefore; but on the whole we are in a position to say that we think well of the proposition. If you wish, I shall be glad to discuss the matter at length and in detail. Very sincerely yours."

He switched off the machine, took another letter from the heap awaiting his attention, and attempted to pin his mind on it. For some reason he was unable to do so. He fidgeted a moment, rose and walked again to the window and looked upon the far-flung panorama of Manhattan.

Now, this indecision or, better, perturbation, was not at all characteristic of this young man. Anyone who knew him well, watching him now, would have sensed that something had disturbed him deeply. He ran his hand through his brown hair with a gesture of discontent and turning at length again to his desk he rang the bell and said to the gray-haired little man who entered:

"Frank, when you leave the office this afternoon you will find O'Hara waiting with the car. I shan't need him again today. Take the typewriter and all this heap of correspondence on the desk, hand them to O'Hara, and tell him to take the whole lot down to the country and have Jefferson put them on the desk in the library."

"But I understood, sir," objected the secretary, "that you had planned to spend the week-end playing golf at Southampton."

"That's so, Frank," responded Stanley, "but I find I can't do it. Please get Mr. Roberts on the phone and explain to him that unexpected and imperative business will detain me. Be as apologetic as you know how. Grovel for me, Frank, grovel."

Wilson smiled. "Yes, sir," he said, "I shall grovel abjectly."

"Great invention the typewriter," continued Stanley, casting an interested eye upon the machine. "You can dictate for hours without having a stupid stenographer around saying, 'What's that, sir?' or 'How do you spell cat, sir?' Talk as fast as you please, talk as slowly as you please, the machine doesn't get restless. It doesn't fix its hair or tap the floor with its foot, and thank God it doesn't chew gum!"

"Yes, sir," smiled Wilson, "it certainly has some advantages over the female of the species, but doesn't it sometimes get out of order?"

"Well," replied Stanley, "the female of the species has been known to do that, too."

Employer and employee smiled together at this feeble jest. You would have guessed that relations between them were not wholly formal and official, and you would have guessed right. Wilson was more than secretary, he was a thoroughly confidential assistant. In fact he knew much more about the business of the firm than Rollin Waterman, who was not only Stanley's partner but his life-long friend as well. And it was not only the business of the firm with which he was well acquainted. He knew much more about the private lives of both the members of the firm than either of them guessed—perhaps a good deal more than one of them would have liked, and he was thinking of that particular one when Stanley turned and mentioned his name.

"Frank," he said, "Mr. Waterman hasn't come in yet?"

"Not yet, sir."

Stanley hesitated an instant, and then tossed his head with an air of decision. "When he does, say I'd like to see him."

"Yes, sir, I will," answered the secretary.

The door had scarcely closed behind Wilson when upon the other side of Stanley's office another door opened and there entered briskly a young woman, clad in the business tweeds of Wall Street. She was a dark, good-looking girl of twenty-three or twenty-four, with assurance written large upon her handsome face and radiating from her eyes of Spanish black.

Stanley turned upon her entrance. "Well, Miss Morgan?" he said.

"Here is a letter," she said in her clipped voiced, "which Mr. Waterman asked me to call your attention to."

He took the letter and read it swiftly. Then he faced the girl with a glance of dissatisfaction as he said: "Why, this is dated three days ago. It should have been attended to before. What happened to it?"

"It got mislaid some way," she answered.

"I see. It just crawled stealthily away and hid itself, I suppose—just out of sight."

The girl looked sulkily at the floor. "I'll see Mr. Waterman about it. After all you're his secretary, not mine."

"I was about to suggest something of the sort, sir."

Stanley looked at her with curiosity but whatever he was thinking he passed over the impudence. "Hm," he said reflectively, and then, "Is that all?"

"Yes, sir."

"Good."

She turned and went out. He was still looking after her in a puzzled sort of way, when the opposite door opened and Rollin Waterman came in, breezily, as usual. Perhaps that was one of the secrets of his charm—he always seemed to bring the out-doors with him.

In the Street these two men were known variously among their intimates as Damon and Pythias, Park and Tilford, or liver and bacon, and they spent more time together out of the office than in it. Their friendship dated from the days when they wore plaques and played together in the park while their nurses gossiped on a nearby bench, presumably, if we credit the professional humorist, with hand some policemen. It is true that the credit side of the ledger of this friendship showed a heavy balance in favor of Jim Stanley, but it is equally true, too, that his opportunities for benevolence far exceeded those of his friend.

Jim and Waterman were about the same age. They had many points in common. They were both well born, of an old New York stock, they were at school together and at college. Jim's father, however, had been a canny and successful business man, and when he died had left a fortune of uncommon size entirely to his son. Waterman's sire, on the contrary, had been an able but erratic person who dissipated the fortunes of his family and left his son a heritage of debts—not that anyone could ever see, however, that these debts weighed noticeably on the mind of their inheritor.

"Hello, Rolly," said Stanley, "a bit late?"

"Why, does it matter? Lively day on the floor, you know."

"Yes, another million share day. Glad we held on to that B. & O. last spring."

"Yes, that will do us a bit of good. Er—Wilson said you wanted to see me."

"Oh, yes, I—oh, by the way, why do you keep that secretary of yours?"

"What's the matter with Miss Morgan?" inquired Waterman, "with just the least indication of surprise."

"Well," said Stanley, "she's careless, and she's impudent. Aside from that she's first class."

Waterman laughed and answered: "Oh, she's all right if you understand her, and she's intelligent, which covers a multitude of sins. That what you wanted to see me about?"

The smile died from Stanley's face. "No," he said shortly, and then added slowly, "no, no, it isn't."

"Well, then, shoot," adjured his friend. "What the deuce is it? You look as glum as a parson's face on a Monday morning."

It was clear that Stanley was embarrassed. This was a thing that seldom happened to him and he didn't like the feeling. However, it had to be done, and now was the time.

"Rolly," he said, "I've had something on my chest for quite awhile and now I'm going to get it off. We've been pals for a good many years. I hope we always shall be."

"I hope so, too," responded his partner. "Why not? Anything gone wrong? Have I done anything?"

"No, no, not a blessed thing," said Stanley hastily. "Don't misunderstand me. I think that ours is the kind of friendship that nothing could spoil, with possibly one exception."

"I can't imagine what the exception could be," laughed Waterman.

"The possible exception," responded the other, "is an exception that has ruined more than one friendship before now. I mean a woman."

"Oh," said Waterman blankly.

He rose from the desk on the corner of which he had been sitting, took one turn up and down the room and stopped in front of his friend: "I suppose you're talking of Doris Colby?"

Stanley shrugged his shoulders.

"Well," said the other, "what about her?"

"Just this. Here we are, you and I, pals—same school, same college, same clubs, and now for two years partners; and as if that were not enough for us to hold in common, it looks to me as if we had gone and fallen in love with the same girl. Of course we've never talked about it."

"People don't, as a rule," muttered Waterman.

"True, but we must."

"Why so?"

"I'll tell you, Rolly. It would be easy enough to let things drift along and take their natural course, but I've been thinking a lot about it and here's how it stands. Many a friendship has been wrecked on just this kind of a reef. Now I don't want our friendship to be wrecked, no matter what happens. I may be all wrong when I say that we both love the same girl. I can only speak for myself, and if I am wrong, just say so and we'll drop it."

He looked inquiringly at his friend, who presently dropped his eyes and shrugged his shoulders.

"All right, then," Stanley went on. "Now it is clear to me that it's begun to get on our nerves. We haven't been ourselves in each other's company for quite a while. It has bothered me a lot, this—this barrier that's been rising between us. Let's break it down. I think that Doris is fond of both of us, though perhaps in different ways. And for the moment there's apparently no one else in the running."

"No," agreed Waterman, "not since Monsieur Le Comte d'Estrelles took ship for home with a refusal in his luggage."

"But," continued Stanley, "she can't marry us both, and it may be that she hasn't the slightest idea of marrying either of us; but I have certain notions of my own upon the point, as no doubt you have also. Some time she must make a choice. So far as we're concerned, the sooner the better. It is my besotted idea that I am the husband designed for her by an all-wise Providence, and you appear to be nourishing designs of your own not precisely in line with that view. Is that right?"

"It is," said Waterman briefly.

"Very well, then, I propose this—we shall each go to her this very evening, one at nine o'clock, and one at nine-thirty. Each of us shall ask her to marry him and the loser shall take his medicine as best he can. What do you say?"

Waterman took another turn upon the rug. Then he thrust both hands deep into his trousers pockets, and thoughtfully jingled a few coins therein. Somehow he seemed to gather determination from the sound. At all events, he turned again to Stanley and burred, succinctly, "It's a bet."

Stanley breathed a sigh of relief.

"Good," he said, "and whoever wins, it's to make no difference whatever in his relations with the other."

"Waterman jingled the coins again. 'Right,' said he.

"Fine," cried Stanley, his face lighting up. He put out his hand. Waterman took it.

"And now," said Waterman, "who goes first?"

"We'll toss for it," Stanley decided.

"Suits me," grinned Waterman, producing one of the jingly coins, "You call it, or shall I?"

"You toss," directed Stanley, "I'll call."

"Right. Here goes!" He tossed the coin.

"Heads!" cried Stanley, as it fell upon Waterman's palm. Stanley inspected the coin briefly, then his face fell a trifle. "Tails it is," said he. "You win. All right, old boy, you go first. But I know that you'll forgive me if I don't wish you luck."

Waterman grinned. "Under the circumstances, yes," said he.

"All right," said Stanley briskly, "I know she's to be at home tonight, for she told me so."

Waterman grinned again. "Yes," said he, "so I heard," and they grinned together.

"Well," said Stanley, "that's that," and made for the wardrobe closet, whence he took his hat and stick. "Awful joke on us," he remarked, "if she turned us both down."

"Can happen," answered Waterman philosophically.

"Anyhow, I'll be d—n glad to get it over."

"Me too."

"All right, then—you at nine, and at nine-thirty enter, so far as you're concerned, the villain. Of course if you've won I'll know it the moment I come in, and it won't be necessary for me to say anything but, bless you, my children. But, best of all, it's going to be a square deal."

"Surest thing you know?"

"Till tonight, then, old man. Win or lose it's all right, and—good luck to—of us," and with that Stanley smiled again and departed.

The remaining partner gazed reflectively after him. Then he lighted a cigarette and sat down. He had a good deal to think about.

CHAPTER II

"Well, Rolly, do you mean it?"

Waterman started. The speaker stood behind him and he had not heard her enter. It was one of her accomplishments, this swift and silent apparition. She was not stealthy—she was simply silent.

"Mean what?"

"Don't stall. I happen to have heard every word you two have been saying."

"Well, what about it?"

"Do you mean it?" she demanded once more.

Waterman's hand was not to be forced.

"Do I mean what?" he said.

"That you're going to ask Miss Colby to marry you?"

Waterman blew the ash from his cigarette.

"What if I am?" he said.

The girl's mouth tightened, her face hardened, her black eyes flashed.

"Just this," she said, "You can't do that kind of thing to me."

"No?"

"No, Mr. Rollin Waterman, not after all that's passed between us—no."

"Why," he said, "what could you do about it?" Though he spoke with a jeer, he was far from comfortable, for

THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois.

British Columbia

The mainland of what is now British Columbia was made a colony and called British Columbia in 1858. Prior to that it was known as New Caledonia.

The government derives a greater return from oil on the public domain than from all other sources of income in public lands combined.

"Hm," said Waterman. "Blackmail, eh?"

he knew well enough that she could and would do something about it. Wherefore his remark was not so much a gibe as a genuine request for information. Information was promptly forthcoming.

"I'll tell you what I can do about it. Do you suppose a girl like Doris Colby would have any use for you if she knew the truth about me?"

"Do you mean that you will tell her?"

"That's just what I mean. You will promise me here and now to give up all attempts to marry her, or I'll go to her and tell her the precise truth about you and me."

"Hm," said Waterman. "Blackmail, eh?"

School for Commuters

Something of Novelty

Carrying still further the new idea of education in the home, several educational institutions of southern California have combined to offer courses to suburbanites for study while traveling to and from their work. Fees are small, the pupil is self-taught, but may consult an instructor if he wishes, and the text-books are small and easy to carry.

More than twenty courses are listed by the school with more to follow if the demand warrants. Subjects which appeal especially to the suburban resident are included, such as home building, home gardening and real estate. Among the others are such varied choices as advertising, art appreciation, aviation, English investments, personal leadership, psychology, radio, salesmanship and stenography.

Thomas Paine's Place in American History

A writer in the Detroit News pays this splendid tribute to one of the great spirits of the American Revolution:

"Thomas Paine was the first man to use the words that now echo over the whole world, 'The United States of America.' As one of the leading lights of the American Revolution, he was of great importance, although none of his many writings indicate that he had a gift for practical statesmanship. His words burned everywhere with a large and splendid ardor for American ideals, for liberty, equality, and the right to happiness."

"His pamphlet, 'Common Sense,' printed in 1776 and followed by the various numbers of 'The American Crisis,' stirred and spurred Americans to the road to freedom more than any other words produced in those days by tongue or pen, unless they were those of the Declaration of Independence. When all men were hesitating over the audacity of final separation from Great Britain, he spoke boldly, demanding to be shown any reason for argument or delay. He preached federal union, that petty jealousies and local narrowness be forgotten:

"Our great title is Americans—our inferior one varies with the place."

Origin of the Polka

A Hungarian dancing master on a walking tour in the 1830s stopped at a small village in Poland where he saw a peasant girl dancing a folk dance that particularly pleased him. He brought back the new steps to Prague, where the dance immediately won great popularity, and named it polka for the land of its origin.

The polka was introduced to America about a decade later, when James K. Polk was a Presidential candidate. Because of the similarity of names the polka became a campaign dance. Articles of various kinds were named for the dance—polka scarfs, polka gloves and finally the polka dot.

R. I. Puts Gas Motor Cars In Freight Service

The Rock Island Lines have just placed in service three new 800-horsepower, distillate-burning, gas-electric motor cars of sufficient power to haul freight trains. These new motor cars are described by Rock Island officials as the "most powerful motor cars in the world".

Used in freight service, these motor cars are geared to pull a freight train of 800 gross tons up a one percent grade at 8 miles per hour, or 37 miles per hour on level track. In passenger service, these cars will haul a total of 260 tons, based on 4 trailing cars in fast service. The trucks are equipped with roller bearings. Each car carries 2 fuel tanks of 300-gallon capacity and is equipped with a hot-water heating plant for cold weather service. In a recent test, at which representatives of sixteen railroads were present, one of these motor cars, operating between St. Joseph, Missouri and Topeka, Kansas, hauled a total of 916 tons.

The cars were constructed under specifications made by the Rock Island Lines management thru the office of E. Wanamaker, Electrical Engineer.

TINLEY PARK

Activities of the Tinley Park P. T. A. as reported by Emma Klepper chairman of publicity.

The Tinley Park P. T. A. had a special meeting May 24th.

The P. T. A. members want to thank all and are grateful for the cooperation of every one in making the play "Deacon Dubbs" a success.

The proceeds from the play were $133.91. Of this $50 will be spent for books in the library, a couch for the rest room, clock for the primary room and a clock, flag and staff and picture for the new room to be opened next fall. The windows will be dressed with new curtains also.

After paying all expenses there will be $50.75 left in the treasury.

Jennie Klepper and Frances Rowden served home made fudge during the meeting.

In mentioning the new election of officers last week, the name of Amanda Neilson, who was chosen chairman, was overlooked.

Florence Anderson will have the meeting of the executive board at her home, Wednesday evening, May 29.

Andrew Jackson's Politics

Andrew Jackson is popularly supposed to have started the modern Democratic party. It was to a large extent the successor of the Jeffersonians. But Old Hickory himself did not apply the name "Democratic" to his followers. During his Presidency and after his retirement to the Hermitage, in all his correspondence he called himself a Republican and spoke of his party as the Republican party.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Most Difficult Things in Life.

A Danish paper recently asked the readers to state what is the hardest thing in the world to do. It received many more replies than it had anticipated, some of which are as follows: To be a toe dancer if you weigh 200 pounds, to get back borrowed books, to trim one's nails while wearing boxing gloves. Some of the readers took the question seriously and answered it seriously. One replied that to live without telling a lie was the most difficult of all.

Years of service in MODEL T FORDS

THE Model T was so strongly and sturdily built that it is still rendering reliable, economical service to motorists in every section of the country. Millions of these cars can be put in shape for two, three and five more years of use at very small cost.

So that you may have this work done economically and satisfactorily, the Ford Motor Company is still devoting a considerable section of its plants to the manufacture of Model T parts. It will continue to do so as long as they are needed by Model T owners. The following list gives the approximate labor charges for reconditioning the Model T Ford:—

Engine
Tune motor (including replacement of commutator case, brush and vibrator points if necessary)	$1.00
Grind valves and clean carbon	$3.75 to 4.00
Overhaul carburetor	1.50
Reline detachable car transmission bands	1.50
Install new pistons or connecting rods	6.00
Tighten all main bearings	6.00
Overhaul motor and transmission	$20.00 to 25.00
Rear System
Replace rear axle assembly	2.50
Install universal joint	3.00
Reline brake shoes	1.50
Replace rear axle shaft, drive shaft pinion, or drive gear	5.00
Overhaul complete rear axle assembly	$5.75 to 7.00
Rebush spring and perches	1.75
Oil and graphite springs	3.00
Front System
Overhaul front axle	$4.00 to 5.00
Rebush spindle hodies and arms (both sides)	2.50
Replace or straighten spindle connecting rod	.75
Tighten radius rod or steering ball cap	.60
Tighten all sockets and joints of front end	1.50
Replace front spring tie bolt or new leaf	2.50
Straighten front axle	3.00
Chassis
Replace rear fender	1.75
Overhaul steering gear	3.50
Repair muffler	1.00
Overhaul radiator	7.50
Repaint Coupe	25.00
Repaint Sedan	25.00
Repaint Touring Car	20.00
Reupholster Runabout	8.00
Reupholster Touring Car	15.00
Replace top deck (Coupe or Sedan)	4.00
Overhaul starting motor	3.00
Overhaul generator	2.60

These prices are approximate and are for labor only, because the need and number of new parts depend on the condition of each car. The charge for these parts is low, however, because of the established Ford policy of manufacturing and selling at a small margin of profit.

All Good Americans Should Know the Flag Code.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON.

JUNE 14 is Flag day, a day for honoring the Stars and Stripes, the symbol of our national unity. It is a day for displaying Old Glory, but how many Americans know the proper use of the flag on this and on other ceremonial occasions? That is to say, how many of us are familiar with the "code" which is the official guide in such matters?

The flag code was adopted at a national flag conference which convened at the call of the American Legion in Memorial Continental hall, Washington, D. C., on Flag day in 1923. This conference was attended by delegates from the principal national patriotic, fraternal, educational and civic organizations. It was revised and endorsed at a second national flag conference held in Washington the following year and the principal rules by which all Americans are urged to be governed in the use and care of our national emblem are as follows:

The flag of the United States of America has 13 horizontal stripes—7 red and 6 white—the red and white stripes alternating, and a union which consists of white stars of five points on a blue field placed in the upper quarter next the staff and extending to the lower edge of the fourth red stripe from the top. The number of stars is the same as the number of states in the union. The canton or union now contains 48 stars arranged in six horizontal and eight vertical rows, each star with one point upward. On the admission of a state into the union a star will be added to the union of the flag, and such addition will take effect on the fourth day of July next succeeding such admission.

The shield of the United States of America has 13 vertical stripes, 7 white and 6 red, with a blue chief without stars.

1. The flag should be displayed only from sunrise to sunset, or between such hours as may be designated by proper authority. It should be displayed on national and state holidays, and historic and special occasions. The flag should always be hoisted briskly and lowered slowly and ceremoniously.

2. When carried in a procession with another flag or flags, the flag of the United States of America should be either on the marching right, i. e., the flag's own right, or when there is a line of other flags, the flag of the United States of America may be in front of the center of that line.

3. When displayed with another flag against a wall from cross staffs, the flag of the United States of America should be on the right, the flag's own right, and its staff should be in front of the staff of the other flag.

4. When a number of flags of states or cities or pennants of societies are grouped and displayed from staffs with the flag of the United States of America, the latter should be at the center or at the highest point of the group.

5. When flags of states or cities or pennants of societies are flown on the same halyard with the flag of the United States of America, the latter should always be at the peak. When flown from adjacent staffs the flag of the United States of America should be hoisted first and lowered last. No such flag or pennant flown in the former position should be placed above, or in the latter position to the right of the flag of the United States of America, i. e., to the observer's left.

6. When flags of two or more nations are displayed they should be flown from separate staffs of the same height and the flags should be of approximately equal size. (International usage forbids the display of the flag of one nation above that of another nation in time of peace.)

7. When the flag is displayed from a staff projecting horizontally or at an angle from the window sill, balcony or front of building, the union of the flag should go clear to the peak of the staff unless the flag is at half-staff. (When the flag is suspended over a sidewalk from a rope, extending from a house to a pole at the edge of the sidewalk, the flag should be hoisted out from the building towards the pole, union first.)

8. When the flag is displayed in a manner other than by being flown from a staff, it should be displayed flat, whether indoors or out. When displayed either horizontally or vertically against a wall, the union should be uppermost and to the flag's own right, i. e., to the observer's left. When displayed in a window it should be displayed the same way, that is, with the union or blue field to the left of the observer in the street. When festoons, rosettes or drappings of blue, white and red are desired, bunting should be used, but never the flag.

9. When the flag is displayed over the middle of the street as between buildings, the flag should be suspended vertically with the union to the north in an east and west street or to the east in a north and south street.

10. When used on a speaker's platform, if displayed flat, should be displayed above and behind the speaker. If flown from a staff it should be in the position of honor, at the speaker's right. It should never be used to cover the speaker's desk, or to drape over the front of the platform.

11. When used in connection with the unveiling of a statue or monument, the flag should form a distinctive feature during the ceremony, but the flag itself should never be used as the covering for the statue.

12. When flown at half-staff, the flag should be hoisted to the peak for an instant, then lowered to the half-staff position; but before lowering the flag for the day it is raised again to the peak. By half-staff is meant hauling down the flag to one-half the distance between the top and the bottom of the staff. If local conditions require, divergence from this position is permissible. On Memorial day, May 30, the flag is displayed at half-staff from sunrise until noon and at full staff from noon until sunset; for the nation lives and the flag is the symbol of the living nation.

13. Flags flown from fixed staffs are placed at half-staff to indicate mourning. When the flag is displayed on a small staff, as when carried in parade, mourning is indicated by attaching two streamers of black crepe to the spear head, allowing the streamers to fall naturally. Crepe is used on the flag staff only by order of the President.

14. When used to cover a casket, the flag should be placed so that the union is at the head and over the left shoulder. The flag should not be lowered into the grave nor allowed to touch the ground. The casket should be carried foot first.

15. When the flag is displayed in the body of the church, it should be from a staff placed in the position of honor at the congregation's right as they face the clergyman. If in the chancel or on the platform, the flag of the United States of America should be placed on the clergyman's right as he faces the congregation and the other flags at his left.

16. When the flag is in such condition that it is no longer a fitting emblem for display, it should not be cast aside or used in any way that might be viewed as disrespectful to the national colors, but should be destroyed as a whole, privately, preferably by burning or by some other method in harmony with the reverence and respect we owe to the emblem representing our country.

CAUTIONS
1. Do not permit disrespect to be shown to the flag of the United States of America.
2. Do not dip the flag of the United States of America to any person or any thing. The regimental color, state flag, organization or institutional flag will render this honor.

3. Do not display the flag with the union down except as a signal of distress.

4. Do not place any other flag or pennant above or, if on the same level, to the right of the flag of the United States of America.

5. Do not let the flag touch the ground or the floor, or trail in the water.

6. Do not place any object or emblem of any kind on or above the flag of the United States of America.

7. Do not use the flag as drapery in any form whatever. Use bunting of blue, white and red.

8. Do not fasten the flag in such manner as will permit it to be easily torn.

9. Do not drape the flag over the hood, top, sides or back of a vehicle, or of a railroad train or boat. When the flag is displayed on a motor car, the staff should be affixed firmly to the chassis, or clamped to the radiator cap.

10. Do not display the flag on a float in a parade except from a staff.

During the ceremony of hoisting or lowering the flag or when the flag is passing in parade or in a review, all persons present should face the flag, stand at attention and salute. Those present in uniform should render the right-hand salute. When not in uniform, men should remove the head-dress with the right hand and hold it at the left shoulder. Women should salute by placing the right hand over the heart. The salute to the flag in the moving column is rendered at the moment the flag passes.

The federal statutes which have been passed for the protection of the flag are the following:

(1) The act of congress of February 20, 1905, providing that a trademark cannot be registered which consists of or comprises, among other things, "the flag, coat of arms, or other insignia of the United States, or any simulation thereof."

(2) A joint resolution of congress approved May 8, 1914, authorizing the display of the flag on Mother's day.

(3) The act of February 8, 1917, providing certain penalties for the destruction, mutilation, or improper use of the flag within the District of Columbia.

(4) The act of May 16, 1918, providing, when the United States is at war, for the dismissal from the service of any employee or official of the United States government who criticizes in an abusive violent manner the flag of the United States.

(5) The act of March 19, 1923, which reads as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any person or persons, firm or firms, corporation or corporations, or other organization or organizations, who, in any manner, for exhibition or display, place or cause to be placed under the flag, color, design, standard, coat of arms, or other insignia of the United States, or upon any intended representation thereof, any inscription, picture, design, device, symbol, name, advertisement, words, marks, notice, or token, or who shall possess, distribute, display, or exhibit, or cause to be distributed, displayed, or exhibited any flag, color, design, standard, coat of arms, or other insignia of the United States, upon which shall in any manner be placed, attached, annexed, affixed, associated, or made a part thereof, any inscription, picture, design, device, symbol, name, advertisement, words, marks, notice, or token whatever, or who willfully and publicly show open or hostile contempt for, trample upon, or otherwise deface or defile any such flag, color, design, standard, coat of arms, or other insignia of the United States, shall upon conviction be fined not less than $100, or imprisoned for not more than six months, or both, for each such offense: Provided, That flags, colors, ensigns, standards, coat of arms, or other insignia the property of or used in the service of the United States, or any state or territory, or the District of Columbia, may have placed thereon such inscription, names of actions, words, figures, marks, or symbols as are authorized by law or by the rules and regulations of the United States government or any department or division thereof.

Sec. 2. That the words "flag," "colors," "coat of arms," or "insignia" used herein include also any picture or representation or simulation of the same.

Sec. 3. That this act shall not apply to the use, wholly disconnected from trade advertising, of the flag, colors, coat of arms, or other insignia of the United States on newspapers, books, cards, certificates, commissions, decorations, banners, pictures, stationery for correspondence, or in or on any article or in any position where its use is purely and obviously for ornamental or patriotic purposes.

Sec. 4. That this act shall go into effect upon its passage and publication, except as to goods which shall have been made and marked in stock at that time, and as to such goods it shall be in force six months after its passage and publication.

It's folly to suffer long from neuritis, neuralgia, or headaches when relief is swift and sure, with Bayer Aspirin. For 28 years the medical profession has recommended it. It does not affect the heart. Take it for colds, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago. Gargle it for a sore throat or tonsillitis. Proven directions for its many uses, in every package. All drug stores have genuine Bayer Aspirin which is readily identified by the name on the box and the Bayer cross on every tablet.

Harvest Assured
No man ever sowed the grain of generosity who gathered not up the harvest of the desire of his heart.

Makes Life Sweeter

Next time a coated tongue, fetid breath, or acrid skin gives evidence of sour stomach—try Phillips Milk of Magnesia!

Get acquainted with this perfect anti-acid that helps the system keep sound and sweet. That every stomach needs at times. Take it whenever a hearty meal brings any discomfort.

Phillips Milk of Magnesia has won medical endorsement. And convinced millions of men and women they didn't have "indigestion." Don't diet, and don't suffer; just remember Phillips. Pleasant to take, and always effective.

The name Phillips is important; it identifies the genuine product. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Weak After Operation

"About five months ago, following an operation for appendicitis I did not gain strength enough to be up and about. My mother and sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken five bottles and it has helped me to get strong so I can do my own housework now. I have recommended it to several friends who have been weak and run-down."—Mrs. Oscar Ottum, Box 474, Thief River Falls, Minn.

The Plane Is 34½ feet Long

This photograph shows the airplane Bremen, first to make the non-stop East-to-West flight across the North Atlantic, as it looked in Grand Central Terminal, Tuesday, May 21, when it was unveiled by Colonel James H. Fitzmaurice, Co-Pilot of the plane and Mayor James J. Walker of New York City. The plane is suspended from the roof of Grand Central Terminal over the New York Central's first train, the DeWitt Clinton. It was presented to the City of New York by the late Baron Guenther Von Huenefeld, financial backer of the flight and passenger on it. The plane weighs more than a ton and its wing spread is 58 feet 6 inches. The plane is 34 feet 6 inches long and 9 feet 6 inches high and has a single motor. It flew from Dublin, Ireland to Greenely Island, N. F., two thousand miles, April 12-13, 1928. Landing on soft ice in the fog it was damaged and later was shipped to Germany for repairs. Colorful ceremonies marked its unveiling. Its final home will be in the Museums of the Peaceful Arts, New York City. Baron Guenther Von Huenefeld bought out the shares of the other owners so he could make possible this gift to New York, who welcomed him so graciously upon his memorable flight to the United States. The Baron died in Germany February last and was internationally mourned. (Herbert Photos, New York.)

PROGRESS AND THE TELEPHONE.—Michigan Manufacturer and Financial Record.

During the 52 years that the telephone has been in existence, not a year has passed but that some improvement has been recorded; not a year has passed but that its use has increased in great numbers. No small part of this increase in general use has been due to the improvements made. Today, the telephone is the greatest convenience of a highly civilized world; the greatest adjunct of the greatest industrial age ever known. This kind of utilities will stand forever as an example of perpetual research, of exhaustive experimentation.

Today, some 3,700 people make up the laboratory division of the telephone industry. Countless improvements have been the reward of the efforts of these workers. The best science can offer is none too good. In half a century they have brought close to perfection an industry which is absolutely necessary to modern life and business. Many improvements have been the reward of years of unceasing laboratory search and research. Chance has played but a very minor part.

The current year has been no exception to the march of progress. Television and transatlantic telephony have become accomplished facts this year. The latter has already taken place in the business and industrial world. What will be the rewards of future years of effort?
